

DAVID STREATFIELD

MA (Information Studies); ALA Principal - Information Management Associates

David Streatfield can offer more than twenty-five years' experience of information management in a variety of organisations in the public, private and voluntary sectors. He has worked as a manager in central and local government, as Managing Director for a major national training and consultancy company, and as a senior manager with Britain's leading educational research organisation. Over the past twenty-five years he has led a series of national research projects on management and information management issues. By the end of the 1980s he was responsible for nationally-funded research and developed projects amounting to more than £600,000 per year. Throughout this period he was involved in organising and delivering professional development and training activities. He has conducted major consultancy projects in the UK and Europe as well as Malaysia, the Caribbean, Saudi Arabia and Kenya, and has gained important European information management experience as National Head of the European Community Education Policy Information System (known as Eurydice) and as Consultant to the Vienna Centre (the European Centre for Research and Documentation in the Social Sciences). He is a member of the Society of Education Consultants and of the International Advisory Board of the International Journal of Information Management.

Main strengths

- expertise in all aspects of information management. He has organised and developed information systems for the Kenya Ministry of Education, the Confederation of British Industry, the London Metropolitan Police and other organisations, and has run training workshops on this theme for senior managers in the public sector on behalf of the National Institute for Social Work, the Society of Education Officers and Cambridge Education Associates;
- managing projects and services. He was Head of Information Research and Development at the National Foundation for Educational Research, where he was responsible for establishing the Education Management Information Exchange service for Local Authority Education Officers and Advisers and the BRIEF briefing service for managers in industry on education; he then became Managing Director to NFER Enterprises Ltd, the training and consultancy company of the Foundation. At an earlier stage he established the Community Work Information Centre for Wales (the first of its kind in Europe);
- enormous experience of conducting small scale surveys and other types of research through to major projects for the Department for Education and Skills, Department of Health, the National Audit Office, the British Library, Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, the Commonwealth Secretariat and others. He was founder Chairman of the Local Education Authorities Research Group, as well as a founder member of the Library and Information Research Group;
- great experience of writing and editing in a variety of styles for different audiences. This has included articles for journals ranging from the Observer to Education and from the International Journal of Information Management to True Detective; as well as preparing and editing research reports (including two for management consultants KPMG) and several books. He contributes a regular column on research methods to Information Research Watch International; he has also prepared distance learning materials and has helped to produce videos;
- the ability to provide succinct and clear briefings on complex educational and information issues for particular types of readers/listeners (such as business managers and policy makers);
- good oral communication skills. He has lectured at the City University, the University of Sheffield Department of Information Studies and the University of North London, as well as at universities in Scandinavia and Portugal; has presented research papers at several international conferences; and has run numerous seminars and workshops.

Publications

David Streatfield has written over fifty publications and research reports as well as more than a hundred journal articles. (See the Selected Publications list below)

INFORMATION MANAGEMENT ASSOCIATES

David Streatfield is Principal of Information Management Associates. The team has carried out various national research and consultancy projects for the Library and Information Commission (LIC) and Re:source, the Council for Museums, Archives and Libraries. The LIC work included the 'Effective College Library' research project (1995 to 1999) (part funded by the Further Education Development Agency), a 'Review of the Need for a National Research Strategy for the Library and Information Field' (1997-8) and an investigation of 'Sources of Research Funding in the Library and Information Field' (1998-9).

Other national IMA research projects were focused on Schools Library Services Management (for the LIC), evaluating aspects of the National Year of Reading for the National Literacy Trust, and advising the Library Association on the 'Use of Volunteers in Libraries'. Concerns raised in the first two of these projects led to a further LIC commission to investigate 'Best Value and Better Performance in Public Libraries'. IMA led the team reviewing the National Training Organisations for libraries and information services and for culture and heritage services (isNTO and CHNTO) for Re:source (2000-1), as well as a Social Audit Feasibility Study for libraries, museums and archives services in the South West of England. Other recent work includes further social audit work and an evaluation of the implementation of the NHS South West Strategic Review of Library and Information Services as well as a feasibility study for the electronic Library for Social Care (linked to the National electronic Library for Health).

Earlier IMA work included evaluations of the National HIV Prevention Information Service and of two other development programmes for the Health Education Authority as well as a review of the need for sexual health information services; and a major survey of the administrative and managerial uses of computers for the Foundation for Information Technology in Local Government. They conducted an extensive investigation of 'The Effective School Library' for the British Library Research and Development Department and completed the research element of the national 'Library Power' campaign organised by the Library Association as well as carrying out the latest in a series of regular appraisals of the information services offered by the British Educational Communication and Technology Agency (formerly National Council for Educational Technology).

Other clients have included the National Extension College and management consultants Price Waterhouse as well as the King's Fund, the Dental Practice Board and the States of Jersey Department of Health. IMA advised the Further Education Funding Council on meeting internal information requirements, helped various Local Education Authorities to develop their information management strategies and assessed the information services of a Regional Health Authority (leading to a programme of professional development). They advised the Further Education Development Agency in developing an information management exchange service for FE Colleges, led a project to create a research information strategy for the Northern Ireland Department of Health and Personal Social Services and helped the Isle of Man Social Services Division to develop an information management strategy.

Overseas and international contracts have included an international survey of potential users in the United Kingdom, Europe and Asia for the British Library, staff development training for the Malaysia Ministry of Education and for INETI, Portugal, as well as advising the Kenyan Ministry of Education on the introduction of an information system for their Planning Unit (on behalf of CfBT Education Services). They have completed various research and staff development projects for the European Foundation for the Improvement of living and Working Conditions, carried out inspections of International Schools in Saudi Arabia and conducted a user survey for Trinity College Dublin.

IMA is part of the Library Association ICT Training Consortium which has been recognised by the Teacher Training Agency as suitable for the training of School and Public Librarians in the use of Information and Communications Technologies.
